The Census of Kershaw District, in South Carolina, which was wanting, has been laid before Congress by the Secretary of State, amounting, in the aggregate, to 12,432, and making the entire popula-tion of that state 502,741. It is understood that the enumeration in Alabama has not been so perfect as it might have been, owbeen so perfect as it might have been, owing, it is believed, to the inadequacy of the compensation or the labour of performing the service in the scattered settlements. DREADFUL CALAMITY.

which aldelphia, Jan. 25.

THE ORRHAN ASYLUM.

We have to record this afternoon one of the most dreadful & affecting catastrophes, which has happened at any time in this country. On Thursday morning between 2 and 3 o'clock, the Orphan Asylum, at the corner of Schuylkill, Sixth & Cherrystreets, was destroyed by fire. Nothing remains of it except cracked and tottering walls. But the eminently dealorable and walls But the eminently deplorable and leart rending part of this calamity remains to be fold. From 20 to 23 of the poor orphans are missing.

The dreadful forebodings entertained yesterday, in relation to the fate of the orphans missing since the destruction of their asy lum were, we fear, but too well founded. Of the whole number missing, twenty three, 20 are girls, and the particulars which we are a-bout to mention, authorise us further to believe the worst. The matron had been ill of pleurisy, and was bled the day before. She, with her daughter and anoting young woman, an assistant, were the only adult in mates of the edifice. The matron was the first to awake, from difficulty of greathing. occasioned by the smoke The two young women, and herself, rescued as many of the children as it was practicable to save, in the short interval of time that elapsed between the moment of their being roused, and the period when the progress of the flames ren dered it necessary for them to retreat. The matron mentions that this interval was but a few minutes. The girls slept in the third story, and, it appears but too certain, that the fire had gained so much head before they were awakened, as to render their escape exceedingly difficult.

Butcher, the watchman of the ward in which the Asylum stood, was first drawn to the building; and resened several of the to the building; and rescried several of the children from the second story. Nutter, the watchman of the adjoining ward, was next on the ground. The latter attempted to ascend the stairs alone, but was driven back by fear of the smoke and flames, which were bursting out. He went up, however, in company with the other, and found on the stairs several of the orphans, whom they exticated. Nutter mounted again to the floor of the second story, and found himself enveloped in suffocating smoke-he groped among the beds, which were emp-ty-and then retreated through a window over the police at the back door When on the portico, he received into his arms a child from the arms of Butcher and descended with his burden by means of one of the columns of the portico

By this time the flames had spread and raged

By this time the flames had spread and raged with so much fury, that access by the stairs was no longer possible. Another watchman informs us, that about this crisis, he heard screams and coughing, as if from the third story. Before the engines could be made ready to play, the interior of the edifice was wholly on fire. The scarcity of water and the extreme severity of the told which froze almost immediately what could be procured formed distressing immediately. be procured, formed distressing impediments to the zeal of the hose and engine associa-We are told that the great exertions of the Phoenix Hose Company contributed chiefly to the preservation of the Widows Asylum, the roof of which they found in flames,

HOUSE of REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday January 23. The resolution moved by Mr. Plumer, on the 6th inst. calling upon the Secretary of the Treasury to communicate to this house such information as he may possess respecting the funds set apart by an act of the State of Maryland, dated Dec 26; 1791, for improving the port of Baltumore, and by an act of the State of Georgia, dated Feb. 10th, 1787, for clearing obstructions in the river Savannah, to which acts the assent of Congress was given March 17, 1800, and by subsequent acts continued to the present time—stating the amount of duties received under said acts, the manner in which they have been applied, and how far the objects therein contemplated have been accomplish-

Thursday, Jan. 24

Mr. Cannon rose to call the attention of he house to a resolution submitted by him some weeks ago, and now lying on the table. It would be recollected, he said, that, on the reduction of the army by Congress at the last session, a different organization at the last session, a different organization had been given to it by the Senate than was proposed by a large majority of the house—which change, he believed, would not have received the sanction of a majority of the house, but for the lateness of the period at which the bill, with this amendment, was eturned from the Senate. The difference establishment as at present organized, Mr have been if otherwiseorganized. He had, for the information of the house, made an estimate, not only of the amount of public money which would be saved by re-organizing the army, but also of the probable number of officers that would be discharged if the army should be re organized according to the resolution which he had moved, and now meant to call up. Mr C here proceeded to state that, should Congress pur sue the couste which he proposed, the to-tal number of officers of each grade disbanded, including both Infantry and Ar-tillery, and excluding the General Staff, would be-
